Meeting Notes

Jason Dombkowski, West Lafayette Police:

• Overall, the football season went well.
• He appreciated the cooperation from the bars during football season and that Breakfast Club seemed well controlled.
• WLPD noticed longer breakfast club lines, and the lines seemed to last longer into the day.
• There are concerns with pedestrian traffic between the Levee and Chauncey Hill.  This fall, officers were stationed in that vicinity to direct people to safer crossing areas.  To encourage safety, WLPD may request more assistance next year from bar staff to educate patrons.
• The barricades have become a staple and will continue to be used in the future.
• Management of outside bar lines has improved, but more work is needed to ensure safety.

Tim Heath, West Lafayette Fire Department:

• The safety of all bar patrons is a priority for WLFD.
• During fall bar observations, WLFD noticed several positive practices, but they also saw several issues of concern.
  o In some locations, door staff are not using clickers to keep track of occupancy.  On certain nights of the week, clickers aren't used at all.  Clickers need to be used every night.  If there is a fire, WLFD must know how many people are in the building.
  o In some bars, the door staff were not even aware of the maximum occupancy limit of the bar, how to find that information, or where the clickers were located.
• Chief Heath encouraged better employee education and training regarding occupancy.
Eric Chin, Purdue Police:

- It was a relatively quiet fall.
- PUPD has seen a significant decrease in charges for operating while intoxicated (OWI) this fall. During football weekends, OWIs dropped from 14 to 7, with an overall drop from 40 to 23 for the entire fall semester.

Sanford Swanson, Indiana State Excise Police:

- The excise police also noticed a quiet fall semester.
- Fake identifications are still problematic. He recommended hyper vigilance in detection.
  - Coalition members discussed different protocols in addressing seizure of fake identifications. There are no established best practices.
  - He will bring together a group to discuss establishing a best practice for fake identification seizures. Some bar coalition members suggested this is an issue that may need to be addressed through the legislature.
- Server training by the Excise police is online and free. A few attendees pointed out that it is not interactive and suggested bars explore other options for training their employees.

Tonya Agnew, CityBus:

- Tonya thanked the bar coalition members for handing out information with bus route information.
  - If you would like additional materials, contact her at tonya@gocitybus.com.
- CityBus has added a Thursday night route. They hope to expand late-night route ridership.
- A new safety campaign will be unveiled soon.

Anne Brown and Patrick Freeland, Purdue Graduate Student Association:

- PGSG sought support for graduate student “pint nights.” In addition, they reminded members that grad students express interest in attending smaller, quieter bars that focus more on craft beers and socializing. Many of those bars are in Lafayette, but they appreciate the focus that some WL bars are starting to cater to more of a graduate student crowd.

Tammy Loew, Student Wellness Office:

- With assistance from Senator Alting, Tammy is working to bring a presenter to a February bar coalition meeting to discuss door management strategies and liability issues.

Kyle Pendergast:

- Purdue Student Government welcomes the opportunity to partner with members of the bar coalition. Members are invited to attend their meetings.
