MAKE THE WORLD YOUR CLASSROOM
Does meeting new people in a far-off place sound exciting? Through study abroad programs in the College of Health and Human Sciences (HHS), you can experience the thrill of living, studying and even working, in another country while you earn credits toward your Purdue degree.

There are other reasons to study abroad. Among them are to break out of your academic routine and expand your worldview, and to develop skills and gain experiences a classroom setting can never provide. You just may learn something new about yourself in the process! Employers often look favorably on students with study abroad experience, so it may even enhance the value of your Purdue degree.

THOSE WHO PARTICIPATE IN GLOBAL LEARNING HAVE A BETTER UNDERSTANDING OF THE WORLD, AND THAT MAKES FOR A MORE PEACEFUL WORLD.
— John Tse, Tse Fund for Global Scholars

START PLANNING NOW
Speak with your academic advisor early in the semester to determine which study abroad program best meets your academic goals and career aspirations. A variety of options are available. Programs range from a week to a year, allowing you to choose what fits your interests, schedule and budget.

Each year, HHS Study Abroad offers a variety of faculty-led programs designed especially for HHS majors. Destinations have included Australia, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Oman, France, India, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland, United Kingdom and more.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES FOR STUDY ABROAD
Study abroad scholarships established especially for HHS undergraduate students are:

- John and Emma Tse Fund for Global Scholars
- Charles V. and Audrey Palm Riker Fund (for Human Development and Family Studies major/minors only)
- Fred and Dorine Santogrossi Study Abroad scholarship (for Psychological Sciences majors/minors only)

A complete list of HHS Study Abroad programs and scholarship opportunities can be found online at www.purdue.edu/hhs/studyabroad.

To discover additional programs in more than 60 countries, visit Purdue’s Study Abroad website at www.studyabroad.purdue.edu.

Visit us on Facebook to see photos of HHS students abroad, call-out dates and more. "Like" us at www.facebook.com/hhsstudyabroadpurdue to receive updates on HHS programs and events.