PSY 390 Research Opportunity – Fall 2017

Faculty member or graduate student
Margo Monteith
Professor—Social Psychology

Description of research area
Research in Dr. Monteith’s lab explores issues related to stereotyping, prejudice, and discrimination. Topics of investigation include: Implicit or unconscious biases can affect people’s perceptions, evaluations, and behaviors in relation to outgroups (e.g., Whites in relation to Blacks); the development of motivation to respond without sexism; and how people react to increased representation of women in traditionally male-dominated domains.

Description of undergraduate participation
Weekly one-hour research group meetings will be held to discuss various projects in the lab and to help undergraduate assistants to learn what the research is all about. Additional time will be spent on planning and execution (e.g., data collection) of the research projects. Scheduling is flexible.

Research setting
Labs in Psychology Building

Number of assistants needed
1

Contact information
Laura Hildebrand (a graduate student in the Monteith lab)
lhildeb@purdue.edu
PSYC 2184

Additional comments
- Must have completed PSY 120
- Completion of or enrollment in PSY 240 and PSY 203 preferred
- GPA of 3.0 or higher is preferred

However, all applicants are encouraged to apply.

Please complete the application on Dr. Monteith’s website (http://www.psych.purdue.edu/~mmonteit/monteith--join-us!.html) and email it to lhildeb@purdue.edu