Medical Amnesty Policy – what it means

- In general, if a student calls an ambulance for help when a victim has alcohol poisoning, the student and the victim will not have consequences in the University conduct system. While the policy may not be applicable in every circumstance, the main focus is ensuring that people who need help receive it without fear of university consequences.

Indiana Lifeline Law – what it means

- In general, the law protects the caller from legal consequences if they call for help when someone needs medical attention from alcohol poisoning. While the law may not be applicable in every circumstance, the main focus is ensuring that people who call for help get it without fearing that they will experience legal consequences.
