

January 10, 2006

Adeniyi joins OnePurdue management staff

Adedayo Adeniyi has joined OnePurdue as its interim director of organizational change management and training, announced Gary Newsom, the project's executive director.

On leave from his position as assistant director for HR training and development, Adeniyi has several years of experience in the areas of human resource management and organizational development. He had been serving as a consultant to Purdue's Human Resource Services since September 2003 before joining the staff in January 2005.

"We are fortunate to have Adedayo on the team," Newsom said. "His background will be an invaluable asset to the project as we enter into new phases this year when training and change management will become critical to OnePurdue's success."

In his new appointment, Adeniyi will oversee all change management activities in the project, including training and communications.

"This is one of the most important initiatives ever undertaken by the University," Adeniyi said, "and I am pleased to be part of it."

OnePurdue is the University's three-year initiative that will change the way Purdue does business by integrating mission-critical enterprise data, information and business processes. Once fully implemented, OnePurdue applications will be used by virtually everyone in the University.

To learn more about OnePurdue and how it will affect you, please visit its Web site at <http://www.purdue.edu/onepurdue/>.

