A good doctor-patient relationship is essential to high-quality healthcare. But in today’s Digital Age, when medical information is available in the palms of our hands, how many choices and how much detail should physicians give their patients, who may or may not have the expertise to make highly-informed decisions? Dr. Barron H. Lerner, professor of medicine and population health at the New York University School of Medicine and the author of The Good Doctor and The Breast Cancer Wars, will help bring this question into focus in conversation with Lafayette-area cancer providers and advocates.

Cost is $15, which includes lunch. Pre-registration is required. Deadline is November 6. Register at www.ywcalafayette.org/ccclunch.

Sponsors and partners: West Lafayette Public Library, Purdue Libraries, Oncological Sciences Center, College of Liberal Arts, Department of English, Office of Public Affairs, Purdue Center for Cancer Research, Office of the Provost, Discovery Lecture Series, Patti and Rusty Rueff School of Visual and Performing Arts, Purdue Galleries, YWCA and MatchBOX

Oncological Sciences Center, Purdue University
oncologicalsciences@purdue.edu | 765-494-4674 | www.purdue.edu/research/ccc