Innovative Australian dance company Chunky Move has teamed up with American sculptor of kinetic marvels Reuben Margolin to investigate the intricacies of movement in nature and energy in dance. Margolin’s large-scale set sculpture is inspired by the motions in nature. Suspended by hundreds of fine strings that become connected to the dancers, the sculpture responds to their agile and athletic movements giving the sculpture the potential to express their powerful human emotions. There will be a post-show discussion with artistic director Gideon Obarzanek.

POSSIBLE CONNECTIONS: African-American culture / ethnomusicology / musical fusion / Appalachian folk music

Take Appalachian folk, the Piedmont blues of the Carolinas and sweeten them with a dash of soul and sass - a recipe for great music cooked up by this African-American string and jug band that will keep toes tappin’ and fingers snapin’.
