

Become a Center Affiliate

The Center for the Environment draws its strength from faculty members across Purdue who have a demonstrated professional commitment to research, engagement and education on environmental challenges and solutions. This community of researchers represents a diversity of disciplines in the natural and physical sciences, engineering and applied science, public health, social science, economics, humanities, and related areas.

By supporting and connecting individuals from these different disciplines, the Center enhances the impact of Purdue's interdisciplinary environmental programs, projects, and initiatives.

Join us! Becoming a faculty affiliate of the Center for the Environment adds value to your work and professional life at Purdue by:

- Serving as a place and an organization through which you connect with others with interests in environmental challenges;
- Providing access to our research development services;
- Promoting your research, teaching and publications;
- Providing opportunities to join teams and signature research areas;
- Keeping you informed of events, calls for proposals and opportunities through our communication outlets;
- Helping in the organization of activities and events;
- Connecting you to funding opportunities through the Center and Discovery Park.

Expectations of Faculty Affiliates

- Help organize or co-sponsor scholarly events and activities of potential interest to other Center affiliates;
- Affiliate your submitted research proposals on environmental projects with the Center;
- Participate and support Center teams, activities, and events.
