The United Way Board Fellows Program placed Purdue students on the boards of local nonprofit organizations as nonvoting members for one year. Sitting alongside community leaders, they'll see how organizations work behind the scenes, contribute to discussions and projects that change lives all while gaining hands-on leadership experience, building their professional network, and learning about board governance, strategic decision-making, and the important role nonprofits play in our community.

Hannah Carlson is a freshman at the John Martinson Honors College at Purdue University, studying Finance and General Management with a minor in Business Economics. She is active in the Brock-Wilson Center for Women in Business and serves as Vice President of Development for the Larsen Leaders Academy. This year, Hannah is beginning roles as a Purdue United Way Board Fellow and a research assistant in the Strategic Management Department of the Daniels School of Business.

Jacob Brooks is a sophomore at Purdue University's Daniels School of Business studying Finance and Business Analytics with a minor in Biological Sciences. He is involved in the Stamps Scholars Cohort, Larsen Leaders Academy, Purdue Solutions Consulting, and undergraduate research in the Daniels School of Business. As a Purdue United Way Board Fellow partnered with Homestead Resources, Jacob has gained hands-on experience in nonprofit board governance.

John Harrell is a sophomore at Purdue University's Daniels School of Business studying Finance and Business Analytics with a minor in Biological Sciences. He is involved in the Stamps Scholars Cohort, Larsen Leaders Academy, Purdue Solutions Consulting, and undergraduate research in the Daniels School of Business. As a Purdue United Way Board Fellow partnered with Homestead Resources, Jacob has gained hands-on experience in nonprofit board governance.

Landon Haffner is a Finance and Business Analytics & Information Management student in Purdue University's Daniels School of Business, pursuing a minor in Real Estate Finance with a concentration in Entrepreneurship. He serves as President of the Modern Business Society and is the Co-Founder of LG Outdoor Services, where he helped scale the business to more than 40 recurring clients. Committed to service, he volunteers with ServLife International and serves in children's ministry at Traders Point Christian Church.

The United Way Board Fellows Program placed Purdue students on the boards of local nonprofit organizations as nonvoting members for one year. Sitting alongside community leaders, they'll see how organizations work behind the scenes, contribute to discussions and projects that change lives all while gaining hands-on leadership experience, building their professional network, and learning about board governance, strategic decision-making, and the important role nonprofits play in our community.

Gracelynn Hyman is a Marketing and Finance student in Purdue University's Daniels School of Business, concentrating in Management Consulting and Leadership. She is a Dean's List honoree and a member of the John Martinson Honors College and Larsen Leaders Academy. Gracelynn is an engaged campus leader and has completed consulting internships, with plans to intern at Polaris this summer.

Sophia Nahass is a junior at Purdue University's Daniels School of Business studying Behavioral Economics. She is interested in the inner workings of service organizations and applying academic knowledge to real-world impact. Sophia hopes to pursue a career that blends her interests in human resources and psychology.

Eleanor Madden is a junior at Purdue University's Daniels School of Business studying Integrated Business & Engineering and Finance. She is a member of the Honors College and is involved in Engineers Without Borders, the Larsen Leaders Academy, and Purdue Run Club. Eleanor is currently serving on the Food Finders Food Bank board through the Purdue United Way Board Fellows Program and has previously interned with Caterpillar. She will join EY next summer as a Business Supply Chain Consulting intern.

Leo Rubchinsky is a junior at Purdue University studying Integrated Business and Engineering in the Daniels School of Business. He is involved in Purdue Solutions Consulting, Project Management at Purdue, Purdue Solar Racing, Larsen Leaders Academy, and Purdue Orchestras. As a Purdue United Way Board Fellow, Leo works with Right Steps Child Development Centers to help expand access to affordable childcare across North-Central Indiana.