

CHANGEMAKER BOILER CHANGEMAKER

The Boiler Changer Award recognizes:

RAHUL JAIN

Rahul has gone above and beyond in every single aspect of what we could call a true trailblazer. He has proven it again and again that to be a boilermaker you don't have to wait for that special moment to accomplish something extraordinary, but instead it's the small, relentless steps that you take every day, slowly and steadily, which could finally culminate in that giant leap of yours.

His pursuit to do good for the community stumbles upon one if you happen to ever cross paths with him. He has always prioritized the needs of his fellow boilermakers while balancing that with his own personal challenges. A fellow boilermaker was facing some serious mental health issues, once Rahul got the slightest of the hint, he took utmost care of them irrespective of how distant of a friend they were. He made them feel at home, gave them the strength they needed, coupled with encouragement.

Call it his love for his students to excel or his passion to teach Physics, he understands how dreary the subject could be and puts in all his efforts to explain complicated principles in the most unique and thoughtful ways.

Rahul didn't lose his calm and perseverance even during one of the toughest times of his life. He continued doing his research as well as serving the community in whatever ways he possibly could. He never gave up.

His passion and purpose inspires everyone around him every single day.

Do you know a grad student who is making big changes? Nominate them at: bit.ly/BCMAWARD