HSCI RESEARCH SEMINAR SERIES
SCHOOL OF HEALTH SCIENCES

HSCI696 will be presented synchronously through simulcast. The link below can be used for the live stream. Authentication is not required.

RHPH 172 Live Stream

“Professionalism: Prepare for Future Success”

Shuang Liu, PhD
Professor of Health Sciences

Tuesday, October 20, 2020
RHPH 172
4:30-5:30 PM

Summary: Professionalism is active demonstration of the traits of a professional. It is not easy to define a professionalism, but it should have all or some of the following characteristics: knowledge and skills of a profession, commitment to self-improvement, creativity and innovation, accountability for his/her work; ethically sound decision making; pride in the profession, conscience and trustworthiness, and leadership. Professionalism aspires to altruism, accountability, excellence, duty, honor, integrity, and respect for others. In this seminar, I will focus on my perspectives on professionalism, which is critically important for the future success of a professional.