Spring 2021 I-O Psychology Colloquium Series Presents a Virtual Research Talk on

COVID-19 Research: How Dual Earners with Young Kids are Managing and Evidence-Based Recommendations for Remote Work

Thursday February 18, 12:00-12:50 US Eastern
(Zoom link HERE)

Presenter: Kristen Shockley (University of Georgia)

Dr. Shockley is an Associate Professor of Psychology at the University of Georgia. She has a Ph.D. in industrial/organizational psychology from the University of South Florida.

She currently serves as an Associate Editor at the Journal of Applied Psychology and the Journal of Business and Psychology. She teaches courses in Work-Family, Motivation and Engagement, and Industrial/Organizational Psychology (UGA).

From her website (link):
“My main area of research focuses on understanding the intersection of employees’ work and family lives. Specifically, I have conducted research aimed at understanding organizational initiatives to help employees managing competing life demands (i.e., flexible work arrangements); research that explores the relationship between work-family conflict and health outcomes, including eating behaviors and physiological indicators of health; research that addresses the theoretical foundations of work-family interactions; and research targeted at understanding how dual-earner couples balance work and family roles.

My secondary area of interest is in career development, with a specific focus on workplace and academic mentoring, people’s idiosyncratic definitions of career success, and the consequences of career compromise.”