1.
ENGLISH 110
American Language and Culture for International Students I
About the Course

- 3 Credit Course
- Part of two semester sequence of classes (ENGL 110 & 111)
- Prereq for ENGL 106
- Meets UCC Human Cultures: Humanities (HUM)

Learning Objectives:
By the end of the semester, students will be able to . . .
- Speak English more fluently
- Read English more fluently
- Communicate in English with increased clarity
- Develop and apply a process for cross-cultural comparison and reflection
Major Projects in ENGL 110

In addition to ongoing homework and class activities, students in ENGL 110 have five major projects during the semester. These projects are connected and complementary.
ENGL 111
American Language and Culture for International Students II
Overview of ENGL 111

This course is designed for international students who learned English as a second language and who are beginning their studies at Purdue. The course builds upon concepts in ENGL 110 and guides students to more directly engage with specific aspects of American culture through increasingly challenging language-based projects.
Major Projects in ENGL 111

In addition to ongoing homework and class activities, students in ENGL 111 have five major projects during the semester. These projects are connected and complementary.
Short Courses

English language instruction designed to meet the needs and schedules of undergraduate and graduate students.

- Focus on specific language skills
- 5-6 week sessions
- Small enrollments
- No additional fee
- Non credit bearing
- In development for Fall 2018
Speaking

Short Courses that will help students improve their oral communication skills for academic and professional purposes.
Writing

Short Courses that will help students improve their written communication skills for academic and professional purposes.
Vocabulary

Short Courses that will help students improve their lexical knowledge and resources for more effective academic and professional communication.
Reading

Short Courses that will help students improve their ability to process written text more efficiently and accurately.